

October 10, 2024

Missouri fulfills obligation to biodiesel plants

BY ALISHA SHURR ON MAY 17, 2018

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — The State of Missouri is fulfilling its obligation to biodiesel plants with the infusion of funds that originally were withheld due to concerns of a revenue shortfall.

“We didn’t do what we said we were going to do, we didn’t pay them for their efforts,” said Rep. Craig Redmon. “Today we are going to do that...we are going to do what government said they were going to do a long time ago.”

The announcement of $4 million to pay off the backlog of subsidies for qualifying biodiesel plants was made Thursday morning by Gov. Eric Greitens. Those making the presentation were flanked by two tractors — a John Deere and a Massey Ferguson — and it was raining.

“This rain is economic development,” said Sen. Dan Brown. He also pointed out agriculture is the number one industry in Missouri and that biodiesel is also economic development.

Missouri produces nearly 200 million gallons of biodiesel in eight production facilities and directly supports 2,500 jobs in the state while indirectly supporting 6,400 more positions.

“For the last 8 years we have been asking Missouri leaders to make good on their promise,” said Warren Stemme.

The Missouri Biodiesel Producer Incentive Fund was created in 2002 to provide incentives for plants that were operating by 2009. To qualify state biodiesel facilities were required to be at least 51 percent owned by Missouri agricultural producers or which uses feedstock that is at least 80 percent of Missouri origin. Those that meet the requirements are eligible for a grant in any fiscal year equal to thirty cents per gallon for the first 15 million gallons produced from Missouri agricultural products and ten cents per gallon for the next 15 million gallons.

“We had the vision to get the biodiesel industry off the ground, made an investment,” said Brown.

“The biodiesel fund is a government program that worked,” said Stemme. “With it, Missouri farmers invested in new technology — biodiesel, which is a clean, renewable fuel.”

The funds have been limited or outright withheld for several years with concerns over revenue to balance a budget. In 2015, the Missouri Soybean Association came forward with a plan to get the debt paid off in three years. The $4 million is the amount necessary to pay off the backlog.

“Paying this debt to biodiesel producers and farmers sets us up to continue moving forward,” said Stemme. “This is good for Missouri.”

He went on to say that this goes to the plant investors, to the farmers, and will help rural Missouri.

“We’re proud to fight for Missouri’s often-forgotten rural communities and farmers,” said Greitens. “These long-promised funds will help farmers and workers in rural communities across the state.”

Sen. Brian Munzlinger (ALISHA SHURR/THE MISSOURI TIMES).

Alisha Shurr

Alisha Shurr was a reporter for The Missouri Times and The Missouri Times Magazine. She joined The Missouri Times in January 2018 after working as a copy editor for her hometown newspaper in Southern Oregon. Alisha is a graduate of Kansas State University.

Recent Posts

Opinion: Investing Decisions Best Left to Professionals

Opinion: Capping Prison Phone Call Rates Is Good for Missouri Families and for Public Safety

TWMP Midweek Update – October 7, 2024

This Week in Missouri Politics – October 6, 2024

Press Release: Former Deputy Attorney General Jesus Osete announces first round of endorsements for circuit judge

Missouri Times 2024 30 Under 30 Honorees

Opinion: Why do anti-abortion billionaires want Wesley Bell in Congress?

Press Release: Representative Cody Smith's Campaign for Missouri State Treasurer Continues Momentum

Parson garners near historic job approval among republican voters

Support for child care and early education initiatives continues to grow

More from Governor

More posts in Governor »

Parson garners near historic job approval among republican voters

Could Missouri be the place for Saudi Arabia’s next big investment?

Democrat pushback on tax cut could set stage for slow-moving special session

Parson officially issues call for special session, lays out plan for income tax cut

Parson signs executive order, Missouri’s drought response goes into action

More from Legislature

More posts in Legislature »

Opinion: Investing Decisions Best Left to Professionals

Opinion: Capping Prison Phone Call Rates Is Good for Missouri Families and for Public Safety

This Week in Missouri Politics – October 6, 2024

Opinion: Zero Accountability —Thy Name Is MoDOT

---

More from motimesblog.com

More posts in motimesblog.com »

Opinion: Investing Decisions Best Left to Professionals

Opinion: Capping Prison Phone Call
Rates Is Good for Missouri Families and for Public Safety

TWMP Midweek Update – October 7, 2024

This Week in Missouri Politics – October 6, 2024

Press Release: Former Deputy Attorney General Jesus Osete announces first round of endorsements for circuit judge

The Missouri Times

TMT PODCASTS

THIS WEEK IN MISSOURI POLITICS

SHOW ME MISSOURAH

WHISPERING GALLERY

CAPITOL CALENDAR

Search

Search for...

Search

Mission News Theme by Compete Themes.