Business and consumer survey

We are conducting an online survey to gather the perspectives of consumers, upstream businesses and downstream businesses on the anti-dumping and countervailing duties on electric bicycles from the People's Republic of China. This is the first time the Trade Remedies Authority has conducted such a survey.

The survey will be open from 14 July 2023 to 27 August 2023 and can be accessed here.

The evidence submitted via the survey will only be used for the Economic Interest Test and will not be used to assess dumping, injury or causation. The survey is anonymous for consumers and we will only publish a summary of responses. We will not undertake a formal verification process for information gathered from this survey but, for businesses, we may get in touch if we need to clarify any information or publish any evidence provided.

This survey should not be completed by exporters, importers or UK producers. These parties should instead complete a questionnaire and upload to the Trade Remedies Service. Questionnaires are more detailed and so will allow these parties to submit information relating to other parts of the investigation.

Our preliminary and final reports for this investigation will be published on our public file.
