As a renewable raw material, natural rubber is widely used in industry, agriculture, national defense, transportation, machinery manufacturing, medical and health fields and daily life, and has important strategic significance for China's national economic construction and economic security. With the sustained and rapid development of China's economy, the important position of natural rubber has become more and more prominent. As the epidemic "wave tide recedes", the automotive and tire industry may usher in recovery growth in 2022, and global natural rubber consumption is expected to achieve a slight increase.

First, the industry competition pattern

China's natural rubber production is relatively stable overall, in 2020 due to powdery mildew and typhoon hazards, natural rubber tapping was affected, at the same time, because Yunnan, Guangdong, Hainan and other places were affected by cold air currents, rubber tapping activities were stopped early, and production fell sharply to 69,3 tons. With the effective control of the epidemic, natural rubber production is gradually recovering in 2021. From the perspective of operating conditions, Hainan Rubber's operating income exceeded 2021 billion yuan in 150, ranking second.
